

Four decades of success prove we weren't joking.

April 1, 1976-2016

April 1, 1976 may have been April Fools' Day, but it was no joke when Kappler opened. Starting in downtown Guntersville with six sewing machines and eight employees, Kappler quickly grew into a respected leader in the serious business of chemical protection.

During one challenging period, founder George Kappler wanted employees to guard against complacency. As a reminder, he posted a sign that said "The Wolf Is Always At The Door." Over the years the wolf became an unofficial mascot for the company, appearing on Christmas cards and other company items.

Much like the wolf itself, Kappler has overcome various threats to not only survive but thrive. Known for its intelligence and survival instinct, the wolf also exhibits a nurturing side in caring for the pack. For us, the pack is more than employees – it's also our customers, vendors and many other friends and allies. We look forward to the next forty years of working together to "keep bad stuff off people."
